Tug to riches
Pastrovich Studio contemplates Khozam

Pastrovich Studio has completed preliminary work on the possible conversion from tug to yacht of the 237'10" Khozam. "The present state of Khozam is very basic, without any well defined interiors and exteriors. We have decided to 'clean' the sheer line and to keep the main parts of the superstructure that we thought were part of the history of the vessel: the funnel, the two amazing masts and the forward superstructure," said naval architect Stefano Pastrovich. "Knowing the boat is the most important thing to think about when preparing for a refit. We focused on the new structure to be added aft of the funnel in a manner consistent with the sheer line. We revised the general arrangement so as to allow a flexible use of space, where living rooms, sitting room and dining areas communicate fluently...In our office we believe in the very freedom of the owner in the choice of his own spaces... In a few words: We got the best of Khozam." Ultimately the project was not carried out, but still remains a great example of refitting. Khozam has a very well known smaller sistership, most recently known as Lone Ranger (ex Simpson S). Both vessels were built in Germany, and for years Khozam served as a support vessel to a Middle Eastern yacht. Stefano Pastrovich worked with Martin Francis and Claus Kusch before serving as Wally Yachts' chief designer and in 2005 setting out on his own. FOR MORE INFORMATION, VISIT PASTROVICH.COM
